Part 405 Revisions

The Agency's proposed amendments to Part 405: Certification of Individuals to Perform Industrial Radiography are now effective. In summary, the adopted changes will:

Increase the fee for the industrial radiography certification exam from $75 to $100 to account for the exam's cost increase, which was recently announced by the exam's provider.

Eliminate the requirement that a certified industrial radiographer trainee, whose non renewal certification is good for 2 years, must take the required examination within 12 months.

Clarify that the certified industrial radiographer trainee status is non renewable and will not be reissued for any other type of industrial radiography.

Note the requirements for renewal of certification and that an individual may not legally perform industrial radiography without valid certification or the expressed approval of the Agency.

Define the process of assessing civil penalties against individuals for violations for the Agency's certification requirement.
